

Young, educated adults in East-India are struggling with financial stress and lack of employment opportunities. One of the that is thought to be affecting the situation is the lack of education about general cultural concepts, such as consumerism and personal identity. As a result, young people in Odisha are risking their lives by consuming tobacco products. The BBC interviews an activist in Odisha who talks about how effective they believe digital storytelling can be in educating youth about basic cultural concepts like consumerism and personal identity. The activist also discusses how it's important for them to talk with boys in particular because what they consume matters so much to them when they're still growing up. BBC article - <https://www.bbc.com/news/av/magazine-34801577/in-odisha-tobacco-is-still-cool-to-young-men> The independent movie features interviews with local actors, musicians and poets. The journalist tells of various problems in the region, including lack of education on cultural topics like consumerism and personal identity. The article also mentions some positive opportunities in the area for young people interested in marketing or media workshops.
